Issue description (including reach: global versus local)	The 2016 cost of living survey of Geneva caused a 5.2% drop in the net remuneration of the staff of the Geneva organizations. Following appeals, ICSC decided in 2018 to review the Post Adjustment methodology and the operational rules that determine the post adjustment index. Name of submitting member(s) &amp; organization (s)	Santhosh Thanjavur Prakasam, UNFCCC
Issue (title)	Benefits and entitlements during remote working
Issue description (including reach: global versus local)	Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, all UN organizations had to quickly shift to remote or working from home arrangements – in some cases, despite not yet having remote working policies in place. Due to changing living conditions in duty stations, for example healthcare services being overwhelmed or schools being closed, as well as individual circumstances, some staff decided to leave their duty station to work remotely from their home base or another country for extended periods of time. The living costs of the remote working location may have been higher than the allowances received by staff for their duty station, namely post-adjustment and rental subsidy. In general, most organizations have reported an effective and positive experience with remote working in the context of the COVID-19 pandemic. High-level discussions are on-going on how to formally include remote working as part of regular contractual arrangements within the UN system. This however will have implications for P-staff entitlements such as post-adjustment, rental subsidies, home leave, and education grants. The objectives of this session are: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• To gather views on issues experienced in relation to P-staff allowances and working from locations outside of the duty station</li> <li>• To gather views on how issues related to P-staff allowances could be handled if remote working becomes part of regular contractual arrangements within the UN system.</li> </ul>
Background documentation	N/A

Action(s) requested from Standing Committee participants	Share experiences, challenges and lessons learned in implementation of remote working arrangements and impacts on P-staff allowances across UN organization that fall under FICSA.
